“Taste of Prospect Heights” Event

“Taste of Prospect Heights” was hosted by 280 St. Marks Avenue on Wednesday, November 4th, to celebrate the launch of sales of the neighborhood’s newest condo. The 32-unit, Brooklyn-bred building will sit five stories tall and incorporate private, outdoor space in every single residence. The building will feature finishes and fixtures by local artisans including art from Fiercely Curious, a communal table by a local woodworker Brian Klotz, custom light fixtures by David Weeks, and of course, custom wallpaper by Flavor Paper.

The event, which took place in the sales office at 631 Vanderbilt Avenue, showcased some of the area’s culinary offerings including famous fried-rice onigiri from Bar Chuko Izakaya, brisket and mac n’ cheese from Morgan’s Barbeque, and roast beef crostini and “shots” of butternut squash soup from Stocked. Local violinist and composer Tom Swafford, who can often be seen playing his violin around town, performed for guests as well. Brooklyn brewery beer was also served.

Over 75 guests, including the project teams from DNA Development, DXA Studio, IF Studio, and TOWN New Development, attended.
